

The Actuarial Foundation is committed to creating innovative programs that make a difference in communities while giving actuaries an opportunity to give back. These programs include: Math Motivators, Modeling the Future Challenge, Building Your Future Financial Literacy Program:

- The goal of the Math Motivators program is to close the achievement gap by establishing a volunteer-driven math tutoring program that pairs low-income urban high school students with professional actuaries and college students majoring in actuarial science, mathematics, or math education. The Math Motivators program is up and running in Hartford, Connecticut and Chicago. Will be expanding to Minneapolis/St. Paul, Seattle and Portland, Maine in 2018-2019.
- The Modeling the Future Challenge is the Foundation's national academic competition in partnership with the Institute of Competition Sciences. The premise is simple – high school students are challenged to develop and present their own mathematical models describing how they envision a new technology or industry will change the future. For the 2018-19 Modeling the Future Challenge, students will analyze one of the biggest concerns in America – the cost of healthcare.
- The Foundation is partnering with Young Minds Inspired, a leading provider of educational outreach programs to revamp the Building Your Future curriculum. The purpose of this revamp is to broaden the use of the Building Your Future program among teens and young adults while appealing to a modern, more tech-savvy audience. The revamped Building Your Future will be launching in 2019.
- The Foundation is also committed to growing the actuarial profession by providing scholarships. - 56 students were awarded with a Foundation scholarship in 2018. - Recipients of Foundation scholarships are selected by representatives of the actuarial profession.
